6. FIELDS OF INTEREST:

His interests spread out from the main questions on political philosophy to the classical problems of philosophy of law, with special regard to the history of law's philosophical ideas. More especially, his research activity focuses on the study of the late 19th century and the early 20th century, paying a particular attention to the origins of legal positivism and the subsequent revolt against formalism. The theory of human rights from such a philosophical and sociological frame represents one of his main interests at the moment. Not only indeed from the natural law's tradition, but also through the expansion of legal positivism, many decisive aspects for the theory of human rights have been developed.
